Internet Censorship:
By Tulsi Patel, Krupa Patel, Himalay Rathod

Himalay:
1. Introduction
   a. What is Internet Censorship?
      i. The control of what can be accessed or published on the Internet.
   b. Who controls the internet censorship?
      i. the government
         1. List examples of governments that have internet censorship
      ii. private organizations
         1. List some private organizations
   c. Why internet censorship exists?
      i. For moral reasons to observe the norms in society
      ii. Example from Blown to Bits book page 229.
         1. Katherine Lester, age 16, met someone online and ends up running away from home.

Tulsi:
2. What is China’s Firewall?
   b. What is being blocked? Examples: Wiki
   c. Pros
      i. youtube - YouKu(Chinese youtube)
      ii. FaceBook - WeChat
   d. Cons
      i. filtered searches
3. Strict Censorship in China vs. Freedom of Speech
   b. some of the banned sites in china:
   c. demo of testing a website on the great firewall of china:
4. Google in China
   a. Not all parts of google are banned.
   b. Chrome and security certificate

Krupa:

5. Censorship for children:
   a. Children are gaining more access to the Internet and there are some problems that need to be considered, such as the "risk that a child may be exposed to inappropriate material of a sexual or violent nature."
   b. One side argues that it is difficult to supervise their children at all times. Due to this fact, there must be some other way to censor the material that is available on the Net. The Internet should not be a place where children can have easy access to sexually explicit material. After all, movies have ratings and now a television chip is being developed to censor what can be viewed on television by children.
   c. Others argue that parents are responsible for the activity of their children and therefore should also be held responsible when their children are misusing a computer. This would eliminate any need for government involvement in the issue.

6. How birth of Internet foreshadowed the death of censorship
   a. The more resources we are going to have, the more censorship issues we are going to have.
   b. How fast internet surfing is growing.